which, when she gets older, will begin to grow thin, and no amount of coaxing will bring it back again. Better let your hair be natural and just plain clean than to grow bald spots through vanity and trying to keep up with the style. Do not use ammonia or borax on the hair; both are drying and injurious. Plain good soap and plenty of it is best. Use hard water if you must, but soft water is much the best. If you use hard water, make it very soapy and let it stand for a time, then skim off the white stuff that rises to the top. Rinse your hair in several waters, after having washed in at least three soapy waters.

Hang nails are a useless torture. Ev ery woman in this day can have nice nails if she will. Suppose you have washed the breakfast dishes; the minute you are through, and while your hands are soft from the dishwater, go to the bowl, put in it a pint of iukewarm water, take your nall-brush, fill it with soap and scrub your nails well. Then with the soft washrag gently rub back the fiesh at the "half-moon" on your nails. If the skin is a little obdurate, soften in the soapy water again, and with the nail of one finger press the skin back. Keep the cuticle wet and work gently or you will make very bad hangnails until you have got your nails trained. Rinse your hands free of the soap and dry them; then rub and rub back that cuticle some more. In a few days you will find that it is all loose and esponds very readily to the treatment When you go to your room take your nail-file and carefully file your nails. removing every bit of unevenness. At night use on your hands equal parts of glycerine and bay rum or rosewater instead of the bay rum. In a little time you will have as nice nails as any one need wish, if you use the buffer every day to polish them. Half an hour's attention once a week will put your nails in a healthy condition, and then all you need do is to polish them a little every day. Nice hands mark the lady; that is, well-kept hands.
